

Chris Cafiero is an Executive Director of Regulatory Affairs for JPMorgan. He supports the development and execution of the strategic response of JPMorgan Asset and Wealth Management to emerging US and global regulatory policy developments. Chris has worked on a number of matters affecting asset managers including sustainable finance and ESG investing, fund names, mutual fund disclosure, fund liquidity risk management, funds' use of derivatives, and fair valuation. He also engages on fixed income, equity, and derivatives market structure developments, and on regulatory policy matters affecting retail investors including complex products and digital engagement practices. He has represented the firm before regulators including the SEC and FINRA, as well as international organizations including IOSCO and the UK FCA. Chris is a graduate of the Georgetown Public Policy Institute with a Masters in Public Policy, and a graduate of the University of Arizona with a B.S. in civil engineering. He is also a CFA Charterholder.