 JOBS....JOBS....JOBS....JOBS ***

CLEA is glad to present this special issue of the Newsletter which carries only job announcements. There will be a regular edition of the Newsletter later this month, but we wanted to get job information to members at this time in the hiring season. Please let the editor or any Board member know if you think this special issue is worthwhile or wasteful. Some postings have deadlines that have passed--but some of these entries were submitted after their nominal deadlines. Interested persons should contact the school to determine if the position is really closed.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITY

The American University, Washington College of Law, is seeking a tenure-track professor in its Clinical Program, with beginning rank to be determined by experience and qualifications. Responsibilities in the in-house clinic, live-client clinical program include teaching a seminar component of the clinic, conducting case rounds and supervising students on their fieldwork. In addition, clinical faculty teach one course each year outside of the clinical curriculum and participate fully in all aspects of the life of the law school.

Clinical faculty also are expected to engage in scholarly research and activities, as well as service to the legal profession, the law school and the university. The Washington College of Law currently has the following clinics: appellate advocacy clinic, criminal justice clinic (prosecution and defense), domestic violence clinic (criminal and civil); international human rights clinic; public interest law clinic; tax clinic; and women and law clinic.

The Clinical Program is interested in exploring possibilities for reshaping current clinics or creating new ones.

The applicant's specific teaching responsibilities will depend on experience, interest, and the overall needs of the clinical program.

Minimum qualifications include a J.D. degree, outstanding academic record, four years' experience as a lawyer, and membership in a bar. Desired qualifications include prior experience or training as a clinical teacher, legal publications, and participation in clinical teachers' conferences and workshops.

The American University is an EEO/AA employer committed to a diverse faculty, staff and student body. Minority and women candidates are encouraged to apply.

Applications consisting of a curriculum vitae and cover letter should be sent to Robert Vaughn, Chair, Faculty Appointments Committee, c/o Office of the Dean, The American University, Washington College of Law, 4400 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20016.

ILLINOIS

The University of Illinois College of Law invites applications for the position of Visiting Assistant Professor to begin December 1, 1995. The position is in the newly formed civil litigation clinic which will be housed in the College of Law. The Professor's primary responsibilities will be to supervise students representing clients in actual cases and to team teach the classroom component of the Clinic. In addition, the Professor will engage in scholarship and service.

Qualifications should include excellence in academic legal training, no fewer than three years practice, admission to the practice of law in the state of Illinois or eligibility to be admitted by Jan. 1, 1996, and scholarly distinction or promise. The candidate should have an interest in clinical/skills/law teaching as a long term career goal.

The appointment is until August 15, 1997 with a possibility of one additional 12 month appointment thereafter. The salary will be dependent upon experience. The College welcomes applications from people of color, women and others whose backgrounds may contribute to further diversification of faculty ideas and attitudes.

To be assured of fullest consideration, applications should be received no later than October 15, 1995 and should be submitted to Dean William Goodman, University of Illinois College of Law, 202 Law Building, 504 E. Pennsylvania Ave., Champaign, IL 61820. Questions about the position can be answered by Prof. Nina W. Tarr, Clinic Director whose phone number is (217) 333-2065. The University of Illinois is an Affirmative Action, Equal Opportunity Employer.

NEW MEXICO

The University of New Mexico School of Law invites applications and nominations for one or more faculty positions, tenured or tenure-track, to begin in the Fall of 1996 and for one or more visiting, non-tenure track faculty positions to teach in the Fall and/or Spring Semesters of 1996-97. The School seeks individuals to teach in any of the following areas: Property, Wills and Trusts, Criminal Law and Procedure, Civil Procedure, Clinical Teaching, Appellate Practice, Business Law, Commercial Law, Indian Law, Contract Law, International Law, Tax Law, Law and Economics, Alternative Dispute Resolution, and Natural Resources Law.

We expect that one of the tenure-track positions will be a person to teach Indian Law in the Clinical Law Program. We also expect to fill one non-tenure track visiting position with a person who will direct our Legal Research and Writing program. The academic rank and salary of these positions will be based on qualifications and experience. Applicants must hold a J.D. or equivalent degree and demonstrate academic promise. Other requirements for teaching in any of these areas may vary. For example, a license to practice may be required for some areas.

For more specific requirements and desired qualifications, please contact Peggy Lovato at the address below or e-mail: applicant@libra.unm.edu. To apply, send a letter of interest that addresses your qualifications, a curriculum vitae, and names, addresses and phone numbers of three references:

Professor Antoinette Sedillo Lopez
Chair, Appointments Committee
UNM School of Law
1117 Stanford, N.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87131-1431

For full consideration, submit applications by October 17, 1995. Recruitment will continue until openings are filled. Entry level applicants are encouraged to apply. The University of New Mexico is an equal opportunity, affirmative action employer.

WYOMING

The University of Wyoming College of Law is seeking applicants for an entry-level tenure-track position to begin with the 1996-1997 academic year. The position will involve directorship of our Defender Aid Clinic.

It has been our tradition for clinic faculty to direct a clinic as a half load and teach regular classroom courses for the other half of their load. Thus the successful candidate will also teach approximately six hours of regular classroom courses. Other courses which might be available for this position include trial advocacy, remedies, research and writing, and a variety of other first-year or advanced courses. Interested candidates should submit resume and application to Professor Harvey Gelb, University of Wyoming College of Law, P.O. Box 3035, Laramie, WY 82071.

ARKANSAS

University of Arkansas at Little Rock School of Law invites applications for a visiting supervising attorney position in the Legal Clinic. The Supervising attorney would develop and run a mental health law advocacy project of the Legal Clinic including the teaching and supervising of students practicing in this project. This project will represent persons judicially committed or facing judicial commitment to a mental health facility. The supervising attorney will also develop and coordinate training programs for lawyers, judges, police, social service employees and other professionals.

Applicants should have a superior academic record and a dedication to excellence in teaching. Prior clinical law experience is not a prerequisite, but is desirable. The person selected to fill this position must be licensed as an attorney and have at least five years of practice. Immediate application is requested. Send letters of interest and resumes to Professor Ken Gould, Chair, Faculty Recruitment Committee, UALR School of Law, 1201 McAlmont Street, Little Rock, AR 72202-5142

WILLIAM MITCHELL

William Mitchell College of Law, St. Paul, Minnesota, invites applications for a visiting professor position in clinical and skills education during the 1996-97 academic year, and possibly the fall semester of the 1997 academic year. The visiting position is open because tenured members of the faculty teaching in the clinical and skills area will be on sabbatical during those semesters.

Responsibilities will include supervising students in the in-house

Civil Litigation clinic, teaching the seminar portion for the clinic, teaching the College's simulation-based skills courses, and participation in all aspects of the life of the law school. The Civil Litigation Clinic currently focuses on serving clients with housing, unemployment, and government benefits concerns. The College's skills courses are fully integrated into the curriculum of the law school and include a required second year Lawyering course, which teaches students skills necessary to work with clients, opposing counsel, and decision makers. The visitor's specific teaching responsibilities will depend on experience, interest, and the overall needs of the College's curriculum.

Minimum qualifications include a J.D. degree, outstanding academic record, four years experience as a lawyer, and membership in a bar. Desired qualifications include prior clinical and skills teaching experience, publications, and participation in clinical teachers' conferences and workshops.

The College is an equal opportunity employer. We strongly encourage women, people of color, lesbian and gay people, and members of other groups historically under-represented in the legal profession to apply for this position.

Submit applications to:

UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA

University of Georgia School of Law invites applications for an appointment to fill a Civil Clinical Faculty Position. The person who fills this position will be responsible for developing, supervising and teaching in a civil clinical program initially involving primarily external placements and appropriate classroom components. The opportunity might also exist to teach in other areas of law. Candidates should have law practice experience and a demonstrated commitment to and competence in legal scholarship. Past successful civil clinical law teaching and administrative experience is highly desirable.

It is expected that the person who fills this position will be appointed as an assistant or associate professor eligible for tenure and promotion pursuant to the rules and procedures generally applicable to the law faculty. It is also expected that—as is ordinarily the case with other tenure track faculty members—employment will be on a nine month academic year basis with the opportunity to secure summer stipends to facilitate legal research and writing.

This is a start-up situation. No formal civil clinic now operates at the University of Georgia Law School. The newly created civil clinical program, however, may continue some or all of the work of the school's existing Public Interest Project class. As part of this class, students engage in such activities as representing battered women in proceedings for temporary protective orders, pursuing alternative dispute resolution on behalf of juvenile offenders, and otherwise intervening (often by working through the local homeless shelter, soup kitchen, magistrate's court, etc.) On behalf of persons in need, typically in a non-litigation context.

In addition to the Law School's interest in filling a Civil Clinical Faculty Position, the Law School invites applications for other permanent and visiting law faculty positions. Applications must be received by December 15, 1995. The Law School is committed to diversity in its faculty and encourages all qualified persons to apply. The University of Georgia is an equal opportunity/affirmative action institution. Contact: Prof. Dan T. Coenen, Chair, Faculty Recruitment Comm., University of Georgia School of Law, Athens, GA 30602-6012.
