AMERICAN UNIVERSITY

Tenure-Track Clinical Professor

American University, Washington College of Law, is seeking a tenure-track professor in its Clinical Program, with beginning rank to be determined by experience and qualifications. Responsibilities in the in-house, live-client clinical program include teaching a seminar component of a clinic, conducting case rounds and supervising students on their fieldwork.

In addition, clinical faculty teach one course each year outside of the clinical curriculum and participate fully in all aspects of the life of the law school. Clinical faculty are also expected to engage in scholarly research activities, as well as service to the legal profession, the law school and the university.

The Washington College of Law currently has the following clinics: civil practice clinic; criminal justice clinic (prosecution and defense); domestic violence clinic (criminal and civil); international human rights clinic; community and economic development law clinic; tax clinic; and the women and the law clinic. The Clinical Program is interested in exploring the possibilities for reshaping current clinics or creating new ones. The applicant's specific teaching responsibilities will depend on experience, interest, and the overall needs of the clinical program.

Minimum qualifications include a J.D. degree, outstanding academic record, four years' experience as a lawyer, and membership in a bar. Desired qualifications include prior experience or training as a clinical teacher, legal publications, and participation in clinical teachers' conferences and workshops. American University is an EEO/AA employer committed to a diverse faculty, staff and student body. Minority and women candidates are encouraged to apply.

Applications consisting of a curriculum vitae and cover letter should be sent to:

Research Assistant Professor of Legal Writing

The University of Arkansas School of Law (Fayetteville) invites applications for the position of Research Assistant Professor of Legal Writing within its Legal Research and Writing program, beginning in the 1999-2000 academic year.

The LRW faculty consists of five full-time teachers. Faculty typically teach two courses each semester. They teach Legal Research and Writing I (3 credits) in the fall and Legal Research and Writing II (2 credits) in the spring to one section of 25-30 first year students. They also teach Legal Research and Writing III (2 credits) to a class of up to 15 second year students each semester. LRW I focuses on analysis and objective writing; LRW II on appellate brief writing and oral advocacy, including a moot court component. Sections in the past have been matched with a small section of Contracts to allow for collaboration. LRW III is a required second year course which includes drafting client letters, pleadings, a non-litigation document and a trial level memorandum. Legal Research and Writing Faculty agree on certain programmatic matters, including numbers of assignments and deadlines, but each teacher retains substantial discretion in structuring and teaching the courses.

Appointment is for a nine month term (August - May) which is renewable, with no cap on the length of service. Salary range begins in the mid-30's, depending upon experience. Faculty may have the option of teaching during the summer for additional compensation. Faculty participate on Faculty Committees and several serve as moot court coaches. Support is available for professional development.

Fayetteville is in Northwest Arkansas, approximately 30 miles from both the Missouri and Oklahoma borders, and the site of the main campus of the University. It is a hilly city of approximately 52,000 in the Boston Mountains, foothills of the Ozarks. It has a relatively low cost of living, and a mild climate.

Applicants should have a strong academic record, and law practice experience. Prior legal writing teaching experience is a plus. Please send a cover letter, resume, and a writing sample. If you would like further information, feel free to contact:

UNIVERSITY OF DENVER

Clinical Tenure-Track Faculty

The University of Denver College of Law invites applications for two full-time, clinical tenure-track faculty positions for Fall 1999. Our Student Law Office trains approximately 100 students each year in its Civil Representation, Criminal Representation, and Mediation/Arbitration and Battered Women's Clinics. The clinical staff consists of two clinical tenure track faculty members, a clinical teaching fellow, and tenured faculty members who also teach nonclinical courses. The Student Law Office operates year round, supervising students on an 8:1 ratio. The Director of Clinical Programs and three secretaries provide support for these live-client clinics and for our extensive internship programs.

In 1904 the College of Law created the second "legal aid dispensary" in the U.S., to aid the poor and to train students. Continuing today, clinical education is an integral part of the educational program of the school. The faculty, the new clinical director, and the new dean are working together to strengthen and enhance clinic programs. Appointments will be made on a flexible nine-month basis to ensure staffing in the summer and to allow clinicians a three-month period for scholarly activities. Faculty members on clinical tenure-track are entitled to benefits and privileges comparable to those awarded to all tenure-track faculty, except that they are restricted to teaching and supervising in clinical courses in client representation; classroom teaching in clinical and internship programs; design and development of specialized clinics, primarily in a poverty law setting; and development of lawyering skills and professional values.

The College of Law seeks individuals with demonstrated potential for superior scholarly achievement and excellent clinical teaching. Professional practice experience is highly desirable. We will consider applications from both entry-level and experienced candidates with a JD degree, willingness to apply for and obtain licensure in Colorado, and prior practice and/or clinical supervision experience. The University of Denver is committed to enhancing the diversity of its faculty and staff and encourages applications from women, persons of color, persons with disabilities, and veterans.

DRAKE

Executive Director of Clinical Programs

Drake University Law School invites nominations and applications for the position of Executive Director of Clinical Programs, a twelve-month, tenure-track position, commencing with the 1999-2000 academic year. The Executive Director's duties include the planning, development, implementation, evaluation, and administration of all clinical programs, as well as teaching, student supervision, and scholarship.

The Drake Legal Clinic is an integral part of the educational program of the Law School; and the Faculty of the Law School are working to enhance clinical and professional skills courses and experiences for students. Clinical programs are housed in the state-of-the-art Neal and Bea Smith Law Center, constructed in 1987, and expanded with additional offices and a courtroom in 1994. The Center also serves as home for the National Center for the Training of Public Service Attorneys. The clinical programs are supported by a $4.6 million endowment. Under the leadership and supervision of the Executive Director, three full-time faculty members and other part-time faculty, Drake students may take both introductory and advanced client representation electives and represent a wide range of clients.

Candidates must possess a J.D. or comparable law degree and satisfy the requirements for admission to the Iowa bar. A distinguished record of clinical teaching or extensive practice-related experience, including litigation, and a demonstrated capacity for significant legal scholarship is required. Management experience, particularly in a clinical or legal services setting, is preferred. The ideal candidate will possess strong academic credentials, organizational ability, excellent lawyering skills, creativity, and a vision for making Drake's clinical programs among the finest in the nation. In furtherance of the University's and the Law School's commitment to a diverse faculty, minorities and women are strongly encouraged to apply.

Nominations and applications (including a letter of interest, a complete CV, and the names and telephone numbers of at least three references) should be sent to:

Professor Gregory Sisk
Faculty Appointments Chair
Drake University Law School
2507 University Avenue,

GEORGE WASHINGTON

Domestic Violence Clinic Supervisor

The George Washington University Law School invites applications for the position of supervisor and clinical teacher in the law school's Domestic Violence Advocacy Project. The DVAP is an in-house clinical program in which court-certified law students represent low-income victims of domestic violence seeking and enforcing civil protection orders in court. The clinical supervisor will work closely with the DVAP's Director and clinical psychologist in administering and teaching the DVAP. Primary responsibilities will include close supervision of students on their court cases and co-teaching of the clinic seminar. To a lesser extent, the new supervisor will also (1) work with psychology graduate students who will be teamed with the law students on cases and (2) assist in administering, training, and supervising the "DEM Project", in which law students respond to patients in the GW Department of Emergency Medicine who have experienced battering.

Qualifications: Applicants must have a strong academic record, significant litigation experience, and experience in and commitment to working with victims of domestic violence. They must either be licensed to practice in the District of Columbia, able to waive in, or be prepared to take the D.C. Bar exam in February or the summer of 1999. Knowledge of civil protection order practice, family law issues affecting victims of domestic violence, and clinical experience are also strongly preferred.

Status: This position is a non-tenure track clinical faculty position, currently funded by a Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) grant from the Department of Justice. The current grant will cover the first year of appointment and has the possibility of renewal. Salary is $65,000/year.

Applicants should send a cover letter and resume to:

Applications will be accepted until the position is filled. The George Washington University is an Equal Opportunity/ Affirmative Action Employer.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY

Tenure-Track Clinical Faculty

Howard University School of Law is seeking a tenure-track professor in its Clinical Program. The School of Law is seeking a senior-level person for a one to two-year visiting position with the intention that the person would become a regular tenured or tenure-track member of the faculty should the professor and the Law School find the arrangement mutually satisfying.

Responsibilities in the in-house live-client clinical program include teaching a seminar component of a clinic, conducting case rounds and supervising students in their fieldwork. In addition, clinical faculty teach one or two courses each year outside of the clinical curriculum and participate fully in all aspects of the life of the law school. Clinical faculty are also expected to engage in scholarly research and activities, as well as engage in service to the legal profession, the law school and the university. The candidate should have a scholarly record commensurate with that of a senior-level faculty member.

Howard University School of Law currently has two in-house clinics. One is a criminal defense clinic in which students represent persons accused of misdemeanors. The criminal defense clinic also represents juveniles in the delinquency system. The other clinic is a general practice civil clinic representing the elderly of the District of Columbia. The Law School is interested in exploring the possibility of restructuring the current clinics and/or creating new ones. The applicant's specific teaching responsibilities will depend on experience, interest, and the overall needs of the clinical program.

Minimum qualifications include a J.D. degree, outstanding academic record, six years of experience as a lawyer, and membership in a bar. Minimum qualifications also include prior experience or training as a clinical teacher, legal publications, and participation in clinical teachers' conferences and workshops.

Clinical Faculty

The William S. Boyd School of Law seeks candidates for up to five new faculty positions. Appointments may be made at the assistant, associate or full professor level, and may be tenured or tenure-track, depending on the applicant's qualifications. We seek candidates with teaching and scholarly interests in a wide variety of fields for appointments to begin in the fall of 1999. We plan to have an extensive clinical program staffed by tenured or tenure track clinicians. We will be hiring nearly a dozen faculty members over the next two years, and are particularly interested in receiving applications from women and minorities.

The Boyd Law School is a new, state-supported law school, the first in Nevada's history. Located at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, in one of the most dynamic cities in the country and surrounded by mountains and national parks. The law school commenced classes in August 1998, with a charter class of 75 full-time and 65 part-time students and a founding faculty of eight experienced legal educators drawn from excellent law schools around the country. The law school aspires to serve the community and state in significant ways, to be a major force in the continuing improvement of the University of Nevada Las Vegas, to provide leadership to the legal profession, to provide access to people of all economic means and circumstances, and to achieve excellence right from the start. We will seek accreditation at the earliest opportunity, with our application to be filed in August, 1999.

While we welcome the opportunity to consider all candidates, we prefer those with excellent records of relevant education and experience. Candidates should be, or aspire to be, excellent teachers, mentors, and role models for our students; and they should be, or aspire to be, actively and productively involved in scholarly and community service activities.

Salary will be commensurate with qualifications and experience. Application review begins immediately and will continue until the positions are filled. Minorities, women, veterans, and people with disabilities are encouraged to apply. Please submit a letter of application and a resume to:

Criminal Justice Clinic

Southern Methodist University School of Law is seeking to fill the faculty position in its Criminal Justice Clinic for the Fall of 1999. The Criminal Justice Clinic is an established in-house clinic with approximately 12 students enrolling in the six credit clinic each semester. In addition, there is a staff attorney with over 18 years of clinical and legal defense experience who assists with the student and case supervision. The faculty's responsibilities include teaching the classroom component of the clinic course, student and case supervision, overall administration of the Criminal Justice Clinic, and research and scholarship. Clinical faculty at SMU are hired on a unitary tenure track and participate fully in the governance of the school. SMU will consider both experienced and entry level clinicians with excellent legal experience and credentials. The school is seeking to continue to diversify its faculty and particularly encourages applications from women and minorities. Applications consisting of a curriculum vitae and cover letter should be sent to:

STANFORD

Clinical Teacher/Supervising Attorney

Stanford Law School and the East Palo Alto Community Law Project seek an experienced attorney to provide direct legal services and supervise and train clinical law students. The Law Project, with a dual mission of providing quality legal representation and quality clinical training to its target community, offers a diverse and challenging opportunity to engage in individual and group representation; community legal education; community organizing and impact litigation.

The attorney will assume responsibility for current casework and legislative efforts focused primarily on housing issues. Attorneys with relevant civil practice experience outside the area of housing are also encouraged to apply. The teaching responsibilities include working with students individually and teaching a seminar related to clinical practice.

Minimum Requirements: JD; 4 years of relevant practice experience; evidence of teaching ability; interest in supervising clinical students; ability to work effectively in a diverse, multicultural community. Spanish language proficiency and active license to practice in California desirable.

Terms: This is a three-year renewable appointment, at both Stanford Law School and the Law Project. The appointment at Stanford will be as a lecturer. Start date will be as early as January 1999 and no later than June 1999.

To Apply: Please send a 2-page cover letter explaining your interest in the position and a resume, by December 11, 1998, to:

VILLANOVA

Director of Clinical Programs

Villanova University School of Law seeks applications for the position of Director of Clinical Programs. The employment status of the position (tenure track or long-term contract) is subject to negotiation. Salary will be competitive. The Director will assume the position on July 1, 1999.

This is a newly-created position and reflects a major commitment to the development of clinical education at the Law School. The Director's responsibilities will include planning, development, evaluation, and administration of all clinical and externship programs. The Law School is committed to hiring additional clinical instructors as financial resources permit. The Director will be expected to participate in generating such additional resources.

In addition to the preceding responsibilities, the Director will be responsible for a clinical program to be developed by the Director. The substantive area of such a clinical program is subject to discussion. Areas of particular interest include immigration law, health care law, and community and economic development; others will be considered.

Applicants should have clinical teaching experience. Management experience, in a clinical or legal services setting, is strongly preferred. The Law School is seeking a strong, creative, and entrepreneurial clinical specialist to coordinate and improve existing programs and oversee the development of new and exciting clinical opportunities.

Applications (including a letter of interest, a complete CV, and the names and telephone numbers of at least three references) should be sent to:

Professor John M. Hyson
Chair, Clinical Education
Task Force

Villanova Law School
Villanova, PA 19085

Screening will begin immediately and it is expected that an offer will be extended by February 1, 1999.

WASHBURN

Clinic Director

Washburn University School of Law (Topeka, Kansas) is seeking applications for the position of Director of our law clinic. This is a tenure-track position carrying full faculty status. The Clinic Director teaches at least 3/4 time in the law clinic and may also teach a traditional classroom course. Applicants should have experience teaching in a live-client clinic, an excellent academic record, scholarly potential, significant legal practice experience, and demonstrated administrative ability. Law clinic faculty may be admitted to the Kansas bar without an exam.

Washburn's clinic is distinctive because we have a long tradition (in fact since the clinic's inception in 1969) of hiring tenure track faculty to teach both in the clinic and the regular classroom, with no distinction in status, salary, or benefits. The Clinic Director teaches at least 3/4 time in the law clinic and may also teach a traditional classroom course. Five out of twenty-seven members of our full-time faculty teach in the law clinic.

Our clinic is a live-client general practice (both civil and criminal) clinic in which students enroll for one semester, for four or five hours of credit. The students are assigned to be supervised by one faculty member who selects cases within his or her expertise and interest. Thus our caseload is flexible, depending upon faculty interest. Students also have an opportunity to engage in mediation through local courts and agencies. A limited number of students are permitted to take an advanced clinic internship after the completion of the first semester. The clinic operates year round and the Director is on a 12 month contract, with one month vacation.

Applications will be accepted through November 30, and until such later time as the suitable applicant is found. Interested applicants should send a letter, a resume, and a law school transcript to:

Professor Sheila Reynolds
Chair, Faculty Recruitment
Committee
Washburn University School of Law
Topeka, Kansas 66621

UNIVERSITY OF WYOMING

Director of Defender Aid Clinic

The University of Wyoming College of Law invites applications for a tenure-track position to begin with the 1999-2000 academic year. The person selected for the position will serve as director of the College's Defender Aid Clinic. Students in the clinic to appellate work in the Wyoming Supreme Court in cooperation with the State Public Defender office, advise inmates in the Wyoming corrections system, and assist public defenders throughout the state with research and writing. Third-year students are authorized under the student-practice rule of the Wyoming Supreme Court to appear in any court of the state with the consent of the client and under the supervision of a licensed attorney.

The responsibilities of the position also include teaching and scholarship. The successful candidate will teach approximately six hours of regular classroom courses per year, including, for example, courses in criminal procedure. Applicants should have strong academic credentials and a commitment to engaging in research and scholarship.

The College seeks applicants with practice experience in criminal law, at the trial and appellate levels. Applicants must have a demonstrated interest in clinical education. The College of Law encourages applications from persons whose backgrounds would enhance the diversity of the faculty.
